

Middle East Committee

Dr. Sara Nasserzadeh PhD DipPST CSC

Dr. Sara Nasserzadeh PhD DipPST CSC, is a Social Psychologist, researcher and a thought leader in the field of Relationships, Sexuality and Multi-Cultural Literacy. Dr. Nasserzadeh is a nationally and internationally sought-after keynote speaker, facilitator and trainer. She is an award-winning author of several books, book chapters, White Papers and peer-reviewed articles. She has been consulted as a senior technical and cultural advisor by governments, international NGOs, academic institutions, professional organizations and the private sector across 39 countries. Dr. Nasserzadeh is a host of a BBC World Service TV show on sexuality and relationship issues which received the BBC's Innovation of the Year Award in 2007. During her chairmanship of the Customer Insights Counsel at Pfizer Inc. she received the annual Innovation Award in 2010 for the design of an unprecedented model to create customer-centric strategic planning. Her international work in the area of multi-cultural and sexuality education has received the World Association for Sexual Health (WAS) runner-up award for Excellence and Innovation in 2007. In 2014, she was awarded the People of Distinction Humanitarian Award in New York City for her philanthropic efforts. She is an approved training provider by the American Association for Sexuality Educators, Counselors and Therapists (AASECT) and served as a Board member and Executive Officer at various organizations including The World Association for Sexual Health where she currently serves as an Advisory Board member and Chair for the Middle East Sexual Health Committee. Her popular quote about human connections is: "it ultimately boils down to how we connect with others in the bedroom to the boardroom".